The Union ministry of information and broadcasting has set up the National Film Development Corporation (NFDC) that aims at the promotion of film culture by providing financial support to select quality films. It encourages new talent and gives opportunity to fresh ideas. Committee for the purpose of setting up NFDC was formed in early 1970 under the chairmanship of Satyajit Ray, who was also its director. The first project undertaken by NFDC was "Sadgati" by Ghatak, which got released in 1973. Other films that were made under the auspices of NFDC are "Chandni Chowk to China" (1974), "Charulata" (1976), "Shai-Kul-Hai" (1978) and "Gora" (1985). NFDC has restored the film archive of National Museum at Kolkata. It has also made available a number of rare documentary films especially on India's freedom struggle, rural upliftment and tribal welfare through its online video portal dikpal. This portal offers a wide variety of Indian, international and regional documentaries including those related to national integration projects.
